To-day, if the weather permits, the Boston Leaguers will play at Atlantic Park. Clarkson and Bennett will probably occupy the points for the visitors, and Maloney and Riddle for the home team. Judge Miller said that the law was not intended to cover such cases as this and Green was discharged.

PICKPOCKETS AT THE RACES.

An Ex-Detective bays They Are Having Things All Their Own Way. A well-known ex detective of Washington said to day that the race track has been infested since the opening day with some of the flyest pickpockets in the country. "They work the crowd for all they are worth," he said. As instances he cited the fact that Mr. Andrew Gleason was relieved of $140 in cash; that two diamond pins were stolen, besides other articles taken by the light-fingered gentry. One of the pickpockets is said to be "Spotty," a well-known New York

THE SHOOTING OF MRS. BARNETT. Her Alleged Insane Son Brought Up in the Police Court,

Cornellus Barnett, the demented son of Mrs. Julia Barnett of 815 New Jersey avenue, was before Judge Miller this afternoon. He presented about the same appearance as when in the dock a few days ago. He was attired in about the same manner and his every action indicated his insanity. He was questioned by Judge Miller as to whether he did or did not occasionally beat his mother, and he admitted that he had done so on several occasions.
"How about the shooting?" asked the Judge. "Can't you tell me who shot your mother?"

Barnett positively declined to say anything about the shooting and would answer no further questions. He acts in the same manner with all others who approach him on this subject.

A WOMAN POISONED.

The Drug Alleged to Have Been Given Her by a Jealous Girl,

Last night about 12 o'clock as Officer Jennings was passing along M street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth, he found a colored woman lying in an unconscious condition. He had her taken to the office of Dr. G. W. H. Fitch, 1313 M street. The doctor at once con-cluded that the woman was suffering from the effects of poison and she was sent to the Freedman's Hospital, where she had periods of consciousness and gave her name as Nancy Kinney. She stated that her home was in George-town, and said she had been up town to attend a little social gathering given by one of her colored lady friends and that they had passed a very pleasant evening One of the girls who was there became jealous on account of the attention shown her by a certain colored man. This girl's name was Lizzie Dake, and Nancy thinks that she administered some drug in the beer they were drinking. This morning she was still suffering from the effects of the poison, but the chances are that she

Is a Change to Be Made at the Washington Asylum?

A rumor was current at the District building to-day that a change was soon to take place in the management of the Washington Asylum (workhouse and poorhouse). These institutions are charge of Intendant Stoutenburg, against whom charges have been preferred from time to time. It is said that Senator Ingalls chairman of the Senate District Committee, is interested in the matter, and has indersed a well-known Kansan for

It is also said that communications reflecting on the management of the institution, have been filed with the Senator. Some of these were furnished by ex-prisoners and employes.

Commissioner Douglas said to a

A GINGERBREAD BAROMETER.

The Curious Device of a Parisian

Boulevard Stroller, From the Almanach de C Ateller, It is nothing more or less than the figure of a general made of gingerbread which Clavette buys every year at the Place du Trone. When he gets home he hangs his purchase on a nail. You know the effect of the atmosphere on gingerbread. The slightest moisture renders it soft; in dry weather, on the contrary, it grows hard and tough. Every morning on going out Clavette asks his servant: 'What does the general say ?"

The man forthwith applies his thumb to the figure and replies:
"The general feels flabby about the chest; you'd better take your um-

A RICH BEGGAR.

A Blind Mendicant Who Is Reputed to Be Worth $5,000, om the Philadelphia Inquire

Probable the richest professional mendicant in this country is the blind man whose face has become familiar to all the habitues of Chestnut street during the past three months, which is about the length of his most recent visit to this city. He must be quite 60 years old, and his face is scarred with the marks of small-pox, and his battered black Derby hat and the faded brown overcoat that he wears have been long in service. He guides himself slowly down the crowded thoroughfare with his stick, and makes no appeal for alms other than that which is conveyed tenement houses in Baltimore, from which he realizes 8 or 10 per cent, annually, and he is supposed to have as much more cold cash stowed away in some hiding place known only to him-

He has been seen in every city from Washington north and between Boston and Chicago, and rarely spends more than three months in any one place. He always travels by rail at the cheapest rates of fare, but nover attempts to beg on the trains. When he goes to Balti-more, which he does at least once a year, he makes a personal inspection of his property and has conferences with a regular agent who collects his rents. On these occasions he usually indulges in a week's debauch, at the end of which he is off on the road again. It is probably true, as it is said of him, that ie knows the principal streets of every great city as well as any resident and can pick his way through any throng

to Incident of Real Life in the City of Brotherly Love,

From the Philadelphia Inquirer A Sunday afternoon couple were passing up Broad street when the gale was blowing its strongest yesterday. He was evidently a stalwart young workingman and she tooked like a shop girl. At the corner of Sansom street a mighty puff of wind ripped her broadbrimmed hat from its insecure fasten ings, carried it fifty feet in the air and let it drop near the front of the Lafay ette Hotel, where a dudish-appearing young man was sauntering along with a natty little fox terrier at his heels. The dog pounced upon the headgear and before his master could call him off had made sorry wreck of it. Across the street on the jump came the girl and her escort, her bair streaming in the wind and her skirts swishing. She burst into cars as the owner of the dog handed the damaged hat back to her and she endeavored to pull its feathers and ribbons into shape. He hesitated a mo-ment or two and then said: "I am very sorry, Miss, but I am quite willing to pay for the harm that has been done.' She made him no answer except to sob louder than before. He drew out his pocket-book, selected a ten-dollar bill from it and offered it to her with the question: "Is that sufficient, miss?" "I guess so," she replied, as she took the money and went on up the street with her young man. "That hat wasn't worth two dollars and a half," was the sage comment of an elderly lady whe was among the peo-ple attracted to the scene.

The Widow of General Crook,

From the Memphis Avalance The proposed pension of $2,000 a year to the widow of General Crook should be doubled and passed by a unanimous vote of Congress. General Crook was no dudish martinet relying upon "influence" to keep him in places, but a sturdy, hard-fighting, hard-thinking soldier who had seen more service than almost any other man of his rank in the Army. He carned more than he received in life and his widow is entitled to something more than scant justice. TYING, BURNING AND CUTTING have been relegated to oblivion since that peerless remedy for piles, Old Saul's Pile Ointment, has been on the market. Its cost is only

A STORY OF LINCOLN. Be Played Ball the Day Before the Convention. One among many memories of prominent public characters stored away by Mr. Edward W. Cox of the Dennison House is a recollection of having played band bail at Springfield, Ill., with Abraham Lincoln the day before the latter was nominated for the Presidency. Mr. Cox, by the way, was a cousin of the late "Sunset" Cox and is now engaged in preparing a series of reminiscences of the boyhood of the New York statesman to be used at the Congressional eulogy on the 3d of next

One of Mr. Cox's sons is Rev. George Clarke Cox, assistant rector of the Church of the Holy Trinity at Harlem, N. Y. Before the nomination of Mr. Lincoln, Mr. Cox was traveling in the West for an oil house. During his travels he for several days used trains which were full of people bound for the Chicago convention. Mr. Cox and fellow-drummer, who was out for a Zanesville ink house, polled all the travelers they could reach and found the utmost enthusiasm for the Illinois Thoroughly convinced that Lincoln would be the nominee the pair of drummers took a run down to Springfield to see the coming man. They found no excitement there and on asking to see Mr. Lincoln were told he could be found the next day, which was the one before the convention, down at the ball park playing handball, a game of which Mr. Lincoln was passionately for Mr. Lincoln was passionately fond.

Next day they visited the park and there they found the man of destiny busily engaged in batting a ball against a blank brick wall and endeavoring to strike it in such a way that it would re-bound out of reach of his opponent. There was quite a crowd sitting about watching the game.

Mr. Lincoln wore, among other gar-ments, a long-tailed, black coat and an old felt hat, which tended to magnify his tall, ungainly form and prominent features and he looked quaintly pict-uresque as he danced about, now hit-ting the sphere a hard blow and again "babying it" so easily that it barely reached his antagonists. When Mr. Lincoln sat down on the players' bench, having finished a triumphant turn, Mr. Cox was introduced to him. Mr. coln received him cordially, asked if he ever played the game, commiserated with him when Mr. Cox said he didn't understand it and offered to teach him. Mr. Cox, however, withinking of the convention and said:

"Mr. Lincoln, I believe you will be the nominee." Mr. Lincoln laughed and said: "I think not. I believe that those Eastern chaps will euchre us out of it, but you are very kind to think I will be nominated, and I am much obliged to you."

Finally one of the players dropped out, and Mr. Lincoln invited Mr. Cox to "take a hand." Mr. Cox of course did so, for he was anxious to play with the man he was sure would be nominated, and the game lasted some time, Mr. Lincoln displaying great skill and strength. When the game was finished Mr. Lincoln kept score for another set of players by notching the points on a stick and calling out "score" in a loud

That evening Mr. Cox spoke to an ac-quaintance of Mr. Lincoln about the next day's convention. This friend said he hadn't the least idea of Lincoln being nominated, and "that if a thing was right all h- couldn't keep Lincoln from doing it, while if it was wrong all h-couldn't make him do it." With culogy of his friend the speaker moved away. On the morning of convention day Mr. Cox, en route to the depot, saw a sight he will never forget. Looking up a street early in the ing the tall, muscular form of Mr. Lin in was seen walling slowly. In his eft arm he held a I ttle child and with the other hand he was leading another child perhaps a little o'der.

Mr. Lincoln was so tall he was obliged to lean toward the little one, and was walking in that strained posi-tion, with his rugged features lighted up with a smile as he amused the children. The man whose name was n a few short hours to be on the tongue of the civilized world, played along the sidewalk of the little Illinois city, with apparently as little concern as though such a matter as a political convention had never entered his mind.
